

Dave Milnes pictured in the main gallery, and below, in the smugglers' tunnel.

Pictures by Simon Hulme

"Then we discovered a loose stone and from that found a false wall at the back of the cellar. It led to the end of the shop and then turned to the bedside. They still think there might be more of it to be found. According to local stories, in the 17th century it was once possible to make your way from the bottom of the village to the top, above the cliff, without coming above ground."